Barbarism as an Aesthetic Problem

Theodor Adorno was fundamentally concerned with what he called the “violence of equality-mongering” or the reduction of life to the abstract equivalence of mere identity or sheer thingliness. When art adopts such a perspective, he said, it “takes photography as its model” and is “no less barbaric than the view of the artist as creator.” That is, in keeping with the original Greek definition, it releases itself from the rule of law. This seminar will take this barbarism as its aesthetic topic and its political problem. To that end we will draw deeply on both the history of recent art-cum-photography and photography-cum-art as well as critical writing by some who have taken sides in or otherwise engaged this aesthetico-political conflict.

Texts

- Walter Benn Michaels, The Beauty of a Social Problem: Photography, Autonomy, Economy
- Blake Stimson, The Pivot of the World: Photography and Its Nation
- Michael Fried, Why Photography Matters as Art as Never Before
- LaToya Ruby Frazier: The Notion of Family (recommended)
Requirements

The primary work of this seminar will be reading and discussion of the readings. Towards that end, you have two primary writing tasks.

The first assignment is to partner up with another student, sign up for one text (or section of a text) for each of two separate class meetings (by using the comments feature in this document), and co-author 1000-1500-word critical responses that draw on additional sources but take the assigned readings themselves as the primary objects of analysis. These should be linked to the syllabus by Tuesday of the week the reading is assigned and then presented informally in class on Thursday. You can sign up for any of the readings and change your choice as needed but we do not want to have more than two presentations for any one class.

The second assignment is a 20pp term paper on a topic of your choice related to the class.

You might think of these writing assignments as opportunities to make some headway working through this experience described by Andrew Ross:

> It took me many, many years to find my own voice, which I think is the most difficult thing for people to do with a standard academic training. [One is taught to] work with the voice of the disciplinary consensus or to ape some master thinker who has been influential in the discipline, and that’s not unrelated to your choice of research topics.

Put differently, your task is one that is often more challenging than it would seem—to think for yourself.

Finally, here are some recent writing tips from the New York Times, a few of which might be helpful.

Evaluation

Your final grade will be calculated based on the following formula: 40% term paper + 40% presentations + 20% seminar participation. Participation will be evaluated based on your thoughtful engagement with the course readings and not on the quantity of your contributions. Unexcused absences will reduce your final grade by 5 points each. Work will be accepted late at the discretion of the professor.

Presentation sign up.

University Policies

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY
As an academic community, UIC is committed to providing an environment in which research, learning, and scholarship can flourish and in which all endeavors are guided by academic and professional integrity. All members of the campus community—students, staff, faculty, and administrators—share the responsibility of insuring that these standards are upheld so that such an environment exists. Instances of academic misconduct by students will be handled pursuant to the Student Disciplinary Policy.

DISABILITY
The University of Illinois at Chicago is committed to maintaining a barrier-free environment so that students with disabilities can fully access programs, courses, services, and activities at UIC. Students with disabilities who require accommodations for access to and/or participation in this course are welcome, but must be registered with the Disability Resource Center (DRC). You may contact DRC at 312-413-2183 (v) or 312-413-0123 (TTY) and consult this resource.

RELIGIOUS HOLIDAYS
Students who wish to observe their religious holidays shall notify the faculty member by the tenth day of the semester of the date when they will be absent unless the religious holiday is observed on or before the tenth day of the semester. In such cases, the student shall notify the faculty member at least five days in advance of the date when he/she will be absent. The faculty member shall make every reasonable effort to honor the request, not penalize the student for missing the class, and if an examination or project is due during the absence, give the student an exam or assignment equivalent to the one completed by those students in attendance. If the student feels aggrieved, he/she may request remedy through the campus grievance procedure.
